What I Learned at The ACC

The most important thing I learned was communication. In the CNA class I learned early on what clear communication is as we had to communicate with other nursing peers. I have carried that onto my career today as a Nurse Practitioner where I not only have to communicate effectively with my patients but my fellow providers and nursing staff.

My Advice to The ACC

Don't be afraid to ask questions. And when you don't know the answer, it is okay to say that you don't. We can all learn something from somebody else.
